Barton on Sea

THE NEW FOREST

Served by local buses, Barton-on-Sea is a little over a mile from New Milton station. Barton is famous for its scenic stretch of coast. It's safe swimming and a cliff-top golf club. Views from the cliff and golf course take in a sweep of coastal scenery from Milford-on-Sea to Hurn Castle and the Isle of Wight.

Magnificent coastal walks, including the start of the Solent Way nearby, make this the ideal area for those who enjoy the great outdoors whether on foot or on horseback.

The cliffs and beach are well known to geologists and many fossil remains have been found including prehistoric reptiles and snails. Highcliffe Castle stands nearby at the foot of the cliffs with steps leading a farm it down to the sandy beach below.

THE CHANGING FACE OF THE BIRTHPLACE

Like most of Stratford's sixteenth-century houses the Birthplace was built from local materials, using oak from the nearby Forest of Arden for the timber frame and stone from a quarry at Wilmcote, three miles from the town, for the foundation walls, chimneys and some of the floors. Despite alterations and restoration work over the centuries, much of the original structure of the house survives.

1769
The earliest illustration of the Birthplace, by Richard Goussier, shows the building with windows set into the wall, a gable and a porch. Although the picture depicts the house standing on its own, it was in fact one of a continuous row of properties along Henley Street.

1798
A drawing by John Jordan shows that by the late eighteenth century the roof windows and gable had been removed.

1807
This drawing by Henry Edridge illustrates the western portion of the main house in use as a butcher's shop. The eastern part was still functioning as an inn, the Swan and Maidenhead.

c. 1815
By the 1830s the frontage of the Swan and Maidenhead inn had acquired a fashionable, brick facade.

THE BIRTHPLACE IN THE 17TH-CENTURY

The property remained in the ownership of Shakespeare's direct descendants until 1670, when his grand-daughter, Elizabeth Barnard, died. As she had no children, Elizabeth left the estate to her relative, Thomas Hart, Shakespeare's great-nephew.

The main house became a tenanted inn called the Maidenhead (later the Swan and Maidenhead) following the death of John Shakespeare in 1601. Members of the Hart family continued living in the small adjoining cottage throughout the century. The two earliest inventories of the house, dated 1627 and 1648, reveal in detail the way in which rooms were used and furnished.

The Birthroom Window

This window was formerly in the birthroom of Shakespeare's birthplace. It became traditional for pilgrims to etch their names into the glass as a symbol of their visit. The earliest recorded date on the window is 1606.

Famous names written on the glass include the Scottish writer Walter Scott, the philosopher Thomas Carlyle, and two great Shakespearean actors, Ellen Terry and Henry Irving.

Henry Irving

Walter Scott

The window has a rich history of use, with the earliest record of its use as a birthplace in 1606. It has been a place of pilgrimage for many years, and the names of visitors are etched into the glass. The window is a symbol of the birthplace of Shakespeare, and the names of visitors are a testament to the enduring legacy of the playwright.

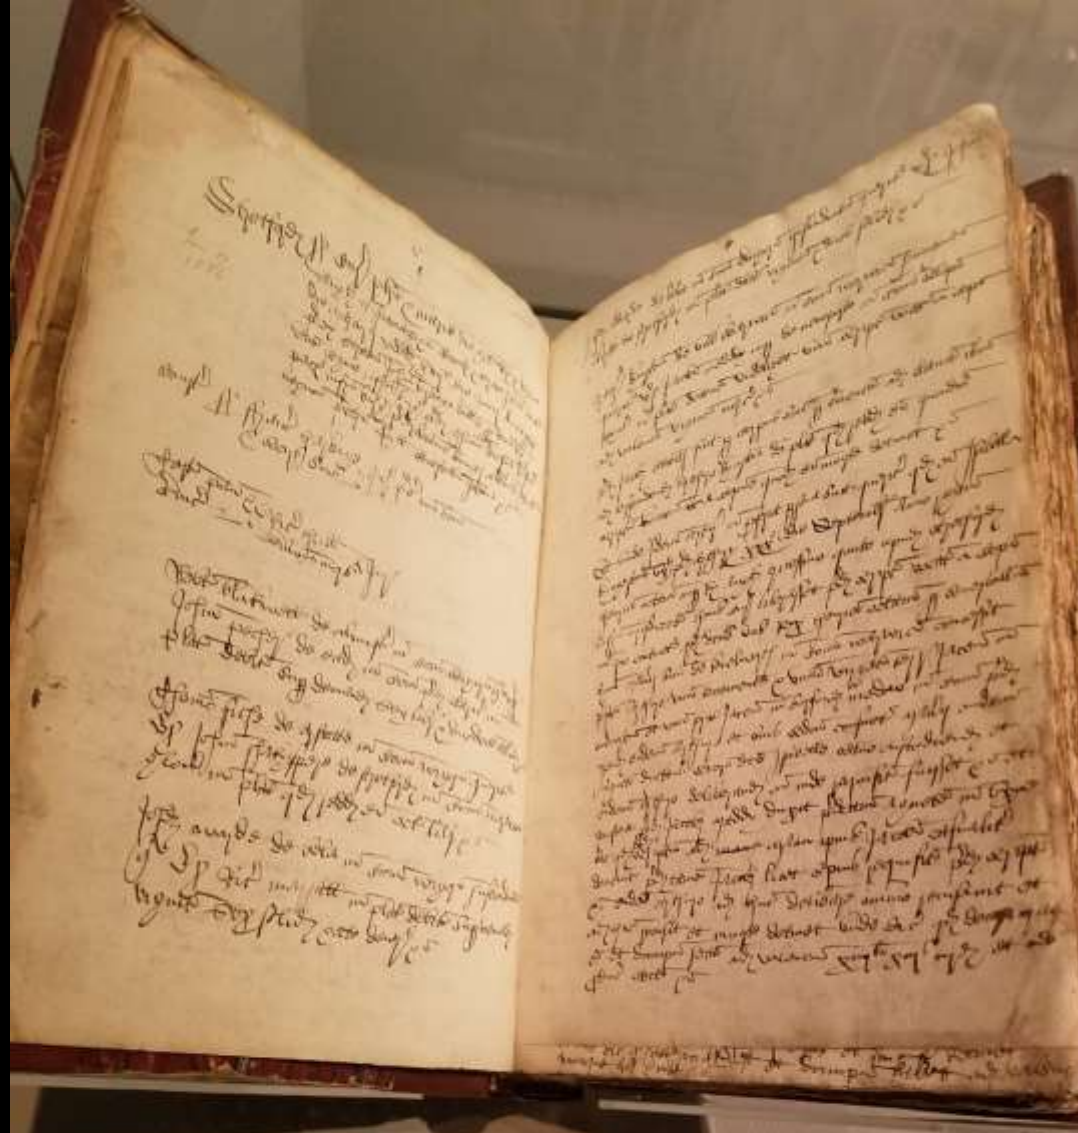

This is the window that hung in Shakespeare's birth room. The window panes are etched with the names of visitors over the years.

On June 17, 1556, Thomas Such brought a case against John Shakespeare in Stratford's court of record for the recovery of £8.

Die Zeit

Die Zeit ist ein wichtiges Element in der Geschichte. Sie ist ein Maßstab für die Dauer von Ereignissen und die Abfolge von Handlungen. In der Vergangenheit wurde die Zeit oft durch die Position der Sonne oder die Stunden der Nacht bestimmt. Heute verwenden wir Uhren und Kalender, um die Zeit zu messen und zu organisieren. Die Zeit ist ein wertvolles Gut, das wir nicht wiederherstellen können, wenn wir es verloren haben. Daher ist es wichtig, sie zu schätzen und sie sinnvoll zu nutzen.

THE STONE

A wide-angle photograph of Piccadilly Circus in London. The Criterion Theatre, which is the large building on the right, is completely covered in white scaffolding and protective sheeting. To its left, the Royal Opera House is visible, featuring its iconic gold-domed roof. In the center of the square is the Eros statue. The foreground is filled with pedestrians crossing the street, and a black taxi is visible. On the right, the entrance to the Piccadilly Circus Underground station is marked with the red circular 'roundel' sign. A vertical banner for 'Stanhope Street' is visible near the station entrance. The sky is overcast.

Bell of Hope

On September 11, 2001, the City of London presented the people of New York City with a Bell of Hope. The bell was made by the City of London and the City of New York. The bell's personal inscription reads: "FOR THE GREATER GLORY OF GOD AND IN RECOGNITION OF THE ENDURING LINKS BETWEEN THE CITY OF LONDON AND THE CITY OF NEW YORK" and "FRIENDSHIP IN ADVERSITY - 11 SEPTEMBER 2001".

Survivor Tree

This Callery pear tree stands distinct from the hundreds of swamp white oak trees on the Memorial. It was discovered amidst the wreckage of the 9/11 attacks, its bark charred from fires at the site and many of its limbs reduced to stumps. Yet somehow, the tree, still bearing leaves, showed signs of life.

Recovery workers transported the tree to a nursery in the Bronx to be cared for by the New York City Department of Parks & Recreation. With careful tending, the stumps of burned and gnarled bark gave growth to longer and smoother branches. Replanted at the 9/11 Memorial in December 2010, this Survivor Tree bursts into magnificent blossom each spring, embodying a living symbol of resilience.
